Start

1. Game objective

The goal of the game is to consciously adopt different leadership styles and, on this basis, make more informed decisions in possible future scenarios characterized by uncertainty and the influence of diverse technologies.

In doing so, the game is intended to foster a nuanced understanding of which leadership approaches may prove beneficial or harmful in specific contexts, while at the same time sharpening awareness of the associated ethical, cultural, and strategic issues.

2. Scenario

Play the audio recording of the selected scenario. It describes the environment in which your game takes place. Afterwards, take a moment to fully immerse yourself mentally in the scenario.

After that, briefly discuss within the group which aspects you perceived as particularly relevant. The target is to develop a shared understanding of the scenario.

3. Context

Your group forms an assembly of executives within the described scenario. Your superior expects you to reach a shared consensus on several strategic questions related to a new technology that will enhance your scenario.

On the second part of the canvas, you document your decisions, which you will present to your superior (= the other teams) at the end of the group reflection.

First, together as a group, define the key characteristics of your company. (max. 3 minutes)

1. Service or product:

2. Company size:

4. Roles

Each participant has been randomly assigned a role, which you can find on the materials in front of you. Reveal the name tags and write down your names. On the back of the tag, you will find a brief summary of the scenario as well as the questions from your superior that you are to discuss during the course of the game. In addition, you'll find a note card with a short description of your role. On its back, you will find a detailed role description.

In the further course of the game, each person argues exclusively from the perspective of their assigned leadership style, even if it does not reflect your personal convictions. Your task is to shape the discussion as effectively as possible according to the logic of your particular leadership approach.

Now read your role description carefully and briefly introduce yourself (your role) to the group. (max. 5 minutes)
